

How much does screening cost?

The fee is $221.60. Most prepaid health plans and insurance companies pay the fee. Medi-Cal also pays it.

The $221.60 fee covers the blood tests as well as authorized diagnostic tests.

This fee does not cover Nuchal Translucency Ultrasound (NT).

How can I get more information?

Please talk to your doctor or clinic about these prenatal screening tests.

All pregnant women will receive a booklet called "The California Prenatal Screening Program." Patients should sign the consent form "Yes" or "No".

Note: Patients with a family history of birth defects may want to go directly to diagnostic testing instead of screening. Talk to your doctor or clinic.
