Are you struggling to include nutrition education in the school day?

This professional development opportunity will prepare you to work with school partners to incorporate nutrition education through instructional planning.

Who should attend:

LIA project coordinators and lead staff working in elementary schools who would like to increase their knowledge about successful instructional planning processes.

Workshop objectives:

- Learn the language and process of instructional planning
- Practice integrating nutrition competencies/health education standards into pacing guides
- Learn to build working relationships with district curriculum specialists and other instructional leaders
- Hear how other districts implement instructional planning, identify partners and much more

Preparing for this workshop:

To get the most out of this training, participants are required to:

- Read one to two short articles (supplied by the workshop organizers)
- Bring your district's or school's pacing guide or other instructional planning tool
- Review the Nutrition Competencies for grades three and four (provided by the workshop organizers)
- Bring a listing of district or school instructional partners

This training is part one of a two part training; part two is planned for fall 2010 and will focus on working with partners to select nutrition education resources and to create a tailored nutrition instructional plan.

Registration fee:

$25 per person and lunch is provided. Space is limited, so please register early. To register click here:
