Risk of Local Zika Virus Transmission by County

Local risk is based on the following factors within a given county:

1) distribution and abundance of Aedes mosquitoes
2) number of travel-associated Zika cases
3) population of county
4) distance from U.S. – Mexico border

Risk of local transmission in a county may change in response to factors 1 and 2, or if local Zika virus transmission increases in northern Mexico.