A Camp for Young Women With PKU

The California Department of Public Health presents the Maternal PKU Camp/Conference to be held at the California State University, Northridge (CSUN) Campus.

This camp/conference provides a unique opportunity for young women with phenylketonuria (PKU) to live and learn together in a supportive and fun environment.

The goals of the camp/conference are to assist participants to:

- ❖ learn about nutrition and the low protein diet
- ❖ learn the importance of following the PKU diet throughout life and especially prior to and during pregnancy
- ❖ develop diet self-management skills
- ❖ discuss PKU-related issues and how they affect campers' lives
- ❖ share experiences and make friends with other young women who have PKU

There will be cooking classes featuring nutrition education, basic cooking skills and hands-on preparation of tasty, low-Phe food.

This year's camp will be held in the San Fernando Valley, just north of Los Angeles at the Marilyn Magaram Center at Cal State Northridge.

Getting there

All participants will be responsible for their own transportation to and from the camp. A shuttle will be available to pick up and drop off campers at the Burbank Airport or the Greyhound bus terminal. If you need help with travel arrangements, or would like to carpool with other campers, please call the contact person listed in the "For more information" section.

Accommodations and facilities

Each camper will be assigned a roommate and will share a double room in a two bed-room suite on the CSUN campus. Staff rooms, a lounge and laundry facilities will also be available on site.

Recreational facilities such as the pool and student union will also be available for use by campers.

Who may attend

Young women with PKU who are 14 years or older, or who are 13 years and will be in the 9th grade this fall, are eligible to attend. Returning campers and residents of other states will be accepted as space and staffing permit. We reserve the right to limit participants based on previous camp attendance.

Registration information

The cost of the 2008 Maternal PKU Camp/Conference includes room, board, and group-sponsored activities.

California residents	$125.00
Out-of-State Residents	$475.00

A completed application packet, health history, consent/release form, and a $50.00 deposit must be mailed back by May 16, 2008. The balance is payable when campers arrive at camp.
