

California Department of Public Health Healthcare-Associated Infections (HAI) Program

Frontline Hospital Training for a High Consequence Infectious Disease (HCID)

All acute healthcare facilities need to be prepared to identify, isolate, and promptly inform public health authorities about patients under investigation (PUI) for Ebola or other HCID. There are a few facilities in California that have extensively planned and trained to be Ebola/HCID assessment or treatment facilities. All other hospitals in California are considered frontline facilities. The Healthcare-Associated Infections (HAI) Program is pleased to provide guidance for frontline facilities to plan, prepare, and train for an emerging or re-emerging HCID event.

Objectives:

- Discuss emerging infectious diseases of concern
- Review current preparedness measures in place at national, state, and local levels
- Describe the need to plan and prepare for a HCID
- Discuss the importance of diligence while using Personal Protective Equipment (PPE)
- Review Just-In-Time (JIT) training solutions

Primary Audience:

- Emergency managers
- Emergency room nurse leaders
- Infection prevention practitioners
